

Meeting with an End User

January 18, 2021

Me: Do you have time to look at an application I made for my computer science class.

End User: Yeah, I've got time.

(Looking at the application)

Me: Do you like the aesthetic of the application.

End User: It doesn't look bad.

Me: Also, can you look at the information's section, to see if you understand everything.

End User: It all makes sense but, I think there are too many words in there, and I don't think people will be willing to read this.

Me: I thought so too. I was thinking of bolding some things, but that would be kind of troublesome as I would have to separate some of the things. But do you have any other concerns about the program?

End User: I think it is pretty good as to how it is, I just think the biggest problem is the information that you are giving out.

Me: OK. Is there anything else, that you can see a problem with?

End User: No, I think this is a pretty cool application already.

Me: OK, thank you for your time.
